

Katherine is a passionate urbanist with 20 years' experience in urban management (Johannesburg, eThekweni and Cape Town), development planning and affordable housing. She has a particular interest in affordable housing impact and local economic development in an urban regeneration context. She initially worked for architects and developers in the UK to gain international experience before returning to South Africa to work in the property finance, housing and urban development sectors. She has worked for NPCs, as a partner in a successful development consulting company, project managed and implemented development for private sector developers, and sits on advisory boards for various projects and initiatives. Katherine currently works for TUHF21 in R&D and development impact. She has a BSc (Hon) in Urban Planning from Wits University as well as certificates in property and development related sectors.
